2014 Reprint of 1948 Edition. Full facsimile of the original edition, not reproduced with Optical Recognition Software. John Howard 'Pondoro' Taylor (1904 - 1969) was a big-game hunter of Irish descent. In Africa he experimented extensively using different types of rifles and calibers, which made him an expert in big game rifles. He is credited with developing the 'Taylor KO Factor' and wrote several now classic books. As a professional ivory hunter with some thirty years of continuous living in the African bush, John Taylor used and tested all the various calibers of British, American and German rifles, and with them killed many species of big game found on the continent of Africa. Taylor's discussion on the practical application of ballistics includes doubles, magazines, and single-shots; the practical value of steel-jacketed bullets versus those covered with cupronickel; the faults of copper-tubed bullets; the actual effects of softpoint bullets with varying degrees of lead exposure; the necessity of modern bullets that will really stand up to the requirements when fired into heavy animals; and many other valuable tips and explanations about cartridges and rifles. Remains a classic work.

Read about the most dangerous animal, getting downwind of your elephant, how to track a man-eater, how hippos navigate, when poisonous snakes attack, where to aim when an animal is charging you, and why zebras are bad-mannered.

A thrilling chronicle of the author's death-defying pursuits of Africa's most dangerous beasts of a time over forty years ago. Taylor describes his adventures when hunting down man-eaters and marauders, whether they be lions, crocodiles, or elephants. It is the accumulation of all the dangerous adventures Taylor met with during his thirty-five years as an ivory hunter. During that time, while living in Nyasaland and Mozambique, Taylor quite often received an SOS from the natives to dispatch a man-eating cat or a rogue pachyderm. In one instance Taylor dispatched, in the time span of a few weeks, a pride of eleven lions that had terrorised an entire district. Some of these man-eating lions were so frightful that the natives gave them specific names, such as the Benga Man-Eaters, the Maiembi Man-eaters, and the Nsungu Man-eaters. As Taylor himself noted, "Those who have not lived among the natives of East and Southern Africa can have no conception of how numerous man-eating lions are in some areas". As if the man-eating cats were not bad enough, there are also stories of bad-actor buffaloes and elephants that raided native crops or trampled a hapless individual or two. John Taylor was a born raconteur, and the colourful descriptions of his hunts of a time long gone will bring you face to face with some of the most ferocious killers of the African bush.

A modern day classic that covers the entire subject of what guns to take on today's safari. Covers types of actions, caliber's, premium bullets, and sighting equipment.

The experiences and opinions of a professional ivory hunter with some thirty years of continuous living in the African Bush--who has used all of the various calibers and most of the suitable cartridges, and with them killed the many species of big game found on the continent of Africa.

Friede Taylor has lived a life that legends spring from. Born in Czechoslovakia during WWII, she was left to die as a child because of the deprivations of the war. A nurse took her family into her home and saved Friede's life by giving her transfusions of her own blood. A member of the dreaded Waffen-SS and a prisoner of war, Friede's father took his own life after the war, having never told her he loved her. She married a serviceman and moved to Georgia at 19. Following the suicide of her oldest son, she had an "open-heaven" experience that assured her that God would provide for and protect her. She was widowed after 30 years. God continued to move in Friede's life, eventually leading her to marry Jack Taylor after a brief courtship. She now travels and ministers with her husband around the world. This is Friede's first book and it chronicles a life of purpose protected by God. Read Friede's story to be inspired to thrive, not just survive. God has a plan for you. Her testimony declares that a life lived by faith always overcomes! "Friede Taylor is a force to be reckoned with! If you have had the privilege to know her, you know what I mean. Once you read her story, you will know why. Sounding more like a Hollywood screenplay, this book shares the candid and personal account of how "one solitary woman" overcame intense rejection and horrendous loss only to survive and thrive, bathed in the glory of the love of God. This is the stuff heroes are made of. Set in one of the most tumultuous places on earth in one of the most horrific times in history, this book is the authentic account of a woman, wife, and daughter who has been watched over by her heavenly Father since she was born. You will be amazed and encouraged as you read how the Father can and will do the same for you." Tim P. Taylor, Author, Publisher, and proud stepson

The popularity of rifles designed to take big game has never been greater. Terry Wieland, a widely recognized firearms expert, explores in detail the rifles and calibers that are drawing attention. This second edition covers what has changed in the field since the first edition was published--new calibers, new cartridges, new guns, new actions--and includes new material on action and barrel manufacture, tracing the production of a fine, custom-made, big-bore rifle.

In Great Hunting Rifles, firearms expert Terry Wieland leads the reader on a journey through the history of some of the most exquisite rifles made in the twentieth century.
