The Boettke/Haeffele-Balch/Storr (hereafter BHS) volume makes a different distinction regarding the history of the Economics Nobel Prize. The six Nobel lectures included in the volume--those of laureates F. A. Hayek, James Buchanan, Ronald H. Coase, Douglass North, Vernon Smith, and Elinor Ostrom--represent what Boettke has called "mainline economics": "a set of positive propositions about social order that were held in common from Adam Smith onward" (quoted in BHS, 3).

"Living Economics" is a superb book. Peter Boettke's passion for excellence in teaching and for his subject, mainline economics (the sort of basic economic reasoning that draws on the ideas of a line of thinkers from Adam Smith through the Austrians to people like Jim Buchanan and Elinor Ostrom) shines through on every page.
